WARNING to car owners

If your "set of wheels" happens to require gas and happens to be parked frequently at the College, you should seriously consider investing a few dollars in a locking gas cap. There has been a real upswing in the venerable art of siphoning gasoline in the last few weeks and more than a few people have found their expensive fill-ups gone when they returned to their cars. As Ken Hughes points out, with the cost of fuel today it is worth your while to spend a few dollars on a locking cap so that it stays in your tank.

Indian Art expert lectures

Of general interest to everyone is a special speaker who will be lecturing to the Crafts department at Cap on Friday, Dec. 3 at 10 am. Well known author, lecturer and authority on Northwest Coast Indian Art, Hilary Stewart, will be speaking about the Salish people and their weaving, as well as the significance of the cedar tree in all aspects of Northwest Coast Indian life. Mienieke Mees reports that Hilary is an excellent speaker, and her lecture is open to anyone who would like to drop by. For more information call Mienieke at 439.

Cap Review gets new Editor

Anne Rosenberg, from Humanities, has the distinction of being the new Editor of the Capilano Review. The Review, for those of you unfamiliar with it, is a high quality literary/art magazine that has been produced at the college for the last decade. Pierre Coupey started the magazine and edited the first nine issues, followed by Bill Shermbrucker. Now, with issue 24/5, Anne Rosenberg has taken over the reins. The Capilano Review, which is funded by the College and Canada Council, is prepared for publication by an editorial board of students and faculty. 500 individuals and 250 major libraries in Canada and abroad subscribe to the magazine which is considered to be one of the finest publications of its kind in Canada. Among the well-known people who have been published in the Review are Margaret Atwood, Michael Ondaatje, bp Nichol, Audrey Thomas, Jack Shadbolt and Arthur Erickson. Says Anne: "The magazine continues to publish the best of the experimental fiction, poetry, art and photography that it can discover." With the publication of Issue 24/5—a special double volume on the art and performances of Gathie Falk—The Cap Review is embarking on an in-college drive for new subscriptions. Faculty and staff will be receiving information on subscriptions which the Review claims "are a bargain at $9.00 for four issues."

Prince George poet coming

The next reading in the Cap Reading series will be taking place Thursday, Dec. 2 at 8 pm in the Cafetheatre and will feature Barry McKinnon. McKinnon is a Prince George poet who was runner-up for the Governor General's award in 1981. Poetry and Prose Readings are free and open to all persons interested in attending.

United Way campaign ends Dec. 8

Many of us know already the real meaning of United Way—the symbolic helping hand is a real one. All of us will meet problems we cannot handle alone. It's comforting to know that we can find help. The programs of the United Way provide so many benefits to so many people: from the caring and friendship at an adult daycare centre or the crisis centre to the most recent scientific advances for the treatment of people with arthritis or cerebral palsy. We are all part of the caring and help when we give. There is still time for Capilano College people to help. Our caring tree will be receiving nourishing donations until December 8. Let's make it sprout right off the poster.

Two more movies this year

On the agenda for the Student Union's film nights in December are two excellent movies--Deer Hunter on Dec. 2 and Norma Rae on Dec. 9. Films are shown in the Lounge on Thursday nights at 7:30 pm. Admission is $1 for students and $2 for everyone else.

Joint Xmas concert to be held

The Capilano College Chorus and the North Shore Chorus are holding a Christmastime concert at the North Vancouver Centennial Theatre on Wednesday, December 1. The choirs will be performing Choral explorations through the centuries from the Renaissance to the 20th Century with Christmas content. Tickets for the 8 p.m. performance are $3 or $2 for students and seniors and are available through the Music department or at the door.

Another note from Counselling

Do your students have concerns about future employment prospects? Counselling offered the above encouraging note—and of course, their services in helping students in distress.

faculty get rave reviews

"Returning", a new record by former Commercial Music instructor Tom Keenlyside is receiving rave reviews and a lot of airplay, reports the Music department. Tom plays sax and flute and his quintet includes Commercial instructors Graham Boyle (drums) and Rene Worst (bass). Congratulations and much more success in the future!
